Minot, N. D., July 9.—Flames of Minot's most destructive fire were spreading at noon after 30 hours of destruction, and owners are checking the loss which will run into hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Nine streams of water are still being played on the premises to hold the flames in check.

Minot, N. The bank, located at Central avenue and Main street, which is the most prominent intersection in town, was situated in the old Jacobson theater building, one of the most historic buildings in the city.

During the conflagration the Leland-Carter hotel, situated across the street from the bank, was seriously threatened and guests were moved to safety.

TURKS GREEKS PLEDGE PEACE AT LAUSANNE

Ismet Pasha, Turkish Diplomat, Wins Notable Victory in Negotiations

DANGER REMOVED

Lausanne, July 9.—Tismet Pasha has proved himself a great diplomat, for by the near eastern peace which was arranged in principle between the allied and Turkish representatives today he achieved signal victory for his country. He never relinquished his grasp on the delicate situation that often confronted the conference. He was better than the brilliant Marquis Gortals in the first steps in the negotiations and kept all the skilled diplomats guessing from the start. He smiled always, but seldom if ever did he yield. The Angora government still must be consulted on several points concerning allied concessions in Turkey but everybody at Lausanne believes that peace surely will be signed within 10 days.

The great result of the Lausanne peace as seen by the diplomats here is as one of the most serious dangers to the happiness of the continent, has been removed by the liquidation of the state of war in the Near East and by the agreement of Turkey and Greece to lay down their arms at last.

Europe troops will evacuate Turkish soil and Turkey with her new type of government will be free to fashion her destinies unfettered.

Uncle Sam May Soon Be Sorting Mail Automatically With New Device

THE NEW GEHRING AUTOMATIC MAIL-SORTING MACHINE

By NEA Service.
Akron, O., July 9.—A decade's labor finally has crystallized itself into a machine that promises to revolutionize mail sorting in postoffices throughout the world.

Approximately three-quarters of a million dollars were expended before the device, now on trial in the city postoffice in Washington, was perfected.

Casimir Gehring, former employee of the B. F. Goodrich Company, conceived the idea in 1913. John Gannamer, now vice president of the Goodrich company, to whom he confided his secret, offered to help him. They worked together several years. Then Gannamer withdrew in favor of Charles C. Cadden, another Goodrich inventor. A section of the Goodrich tire plant became their laboratory.

A machine, crude compared with the perfected model, was tried out in the Chicago postoffice for a year. Meanwhile, Gehring and Cadden found much room for improvement. They started work again and after six years evolved the sorter now in use.

If the Washington trials prove successful, the machine probably will be placed in all the larger offices. Gehring now makes his headquarters in Newark, N. J.

Sorting is done by hand at present. But antiquated methods must go in the postoffice as well as in other business and industry.

Five clerks work on one machine. The operators may sit down while on duty. Each has a separate keyboard, similar to that of a linotype, before him. He presses a certain key and the letters go on its way to a compartment.

The machine, if it survives the tests, probably will be adopted by foreign governments, too.

Judge Cooley Will Sit In Builders Case

District Judge Charles M. Cooley of Grand Forks has been named by the supreme court to sit on the supreme bench in the consideration of the George E. Wallace case involving prices to be paid by persons for homes built by the Home Building Association of the state. Building in place of Judge Johnson, disqualified by reason of the fact that he was Attorney-General when the case was instituted.

TUTTLE CASE IS AFFIRMED

No Partnership Existed With L. C. Pettibone, Court Finds

The supreme court affirmed the Burleigh district court in declining to grant the petition of L. C. Pettibone of Dawson for dissolution of an alleged partnership with W. P. Tuttle, former wealthy Chicago grain man and resident of North Dakota for several years, in which Pettibone claimed profits amounting to several thousands of dollars in North Dakota land deals.

Judge Neussle, in district court, held that the evidence showed an understanding but not sufficient to make it a partnership in law, this view being affirmed in the supreme court. The opinion was written by District Judge Kneeshaw, sitting in the stead of Judge Neussle.

Pettibone declared that about 1911 a partnership was agreed to whereby he was to purchase several thousand acres of land for Tuttle, that land was purchased in Kidder county and in Billings county, that they were to divide the profits of increased price of the land and that it is now worth $25 an acre.

AT ROAD OPENING

J. A. Kitchen, commissioner of agriculture and labor and member of the state highway commission and W. G. Black, state engineer were among those expected to be at the opening of the new state road from Marmarth to the oil development field 14 miles southwest of that city today.

JURY — HOUR AND HALF

Conviction Marks Culmination of Bitter Fight in Florida Flogging

Lake City, Fla., July 9.—Judge McMullan yesterday denied a motion for a new trial for Thomas Walter Higginbotham, convicted Saturday night of second degree murder in connection with the death of Martin Tabert. The case probably will now go to the supreme court. Higginbotham, who was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment, is out on bonds of $10,000, pending his appeal to the supreme court.

Sentencing of Higginbotham yesterday by Judge McMullan set a precedent for a sentence on a Sunday. Following Higginbotham's conviction Saturday his counsel immediately announced they would file a motion for a new trial. Judge McMullan yesterday denied this motion.

The judge said he had been advised the case would be taken to the state supreme court and Higginbotham was released on $10,000 bond until the higher court disposes of the case.

Today Higginbotham and his wife and 4-year-old son were back in their home at Green Cove Springs, Fla. Attorneys for the Tabert family declared after the conviction a damage suit for from $50,000 to $100,000 would be filed against the Putnam Lumber Company as a result of Martin Tabert's death.

HIGGINBOTHAM GUILTY

Lake City, Fla., July 9.—Thomas Walter Higginbotham late Saturday was found guilty of murder of Martin Tabert, of North Dakota, in the second degree by a jury here. The jury was out one hour and twenty minutes.

Higginbotham was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment. He was released on $10,000 bond pending hearing of appeal.

The former convict whipping boss was accused of having caused the death of Tabert as the result of a beating administered while the North Dakotan was serving a term in the Putnam Lumber company convict lease camp. The trial consumed thirteen days.

The death of Tabert finally resulted in an investigation of the whole leasing system and its abolishment by the Florida legislature. That body also prohibited corporal punishment. Before the Florida legislature convened, the senate of North Dakota adopted a memorial asking the Florida lawmakers to investigate the death of Tabert.

BADLY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Mrs. John Haider in Serious Condition in Hospital

Mrs. Mary Haider was badly injured in an automobile collision Sunday morning about 9:15 at the corner of Thayer and Washington streets, between a car driven by John Obawa, brother of Mrs. Haider, and Archie Johnson, accountant at The Tribune.

Neither driver saw the other, apparently. According to police reports the Obawa car struck Johnson's car, striking the front fender and running board which were badly damaged. The Obawa car turned over. Mrs. Haider being pinned under it. Her two brothers in the car escaped serious injury.

Mr. Johnson rushed Mrs. Haider to the St. Alexius hospital.

Mrs. Haider was reported to be resting easy at the hospital this morning, but having sustained a fracture of the back of the skull, five fractured ribs, a broken shoulder and a crushed lung as a result of the automobile in which she was riding overturning.

It was feared last night that she would die and she is regarded in a serious condition today.

Drivers of both cars feel they were not to blame. Police investigated, but have not placed the blame on either driver.

Two automobiles went off the grade at the McKenzie slough on the Red Trail last night according to Harry Clough of this city. They went off, he said, because weeds were so high that drivers could not see the edge and added that if the weeds were blown wherever there is a grade it would be a big safety factor for motorists.

HIGGINBOTHAM IS DENIED NEW MURDER TRIAL

Whipping Boss, Convicted of Causing Death of Martin Tabert, to Appeal Case

JURY — HOUR AND HALF

Conviction Marks Culmination of Bitter Fight in Florida Flogging

Lake City, Fla., July 9.—Judge McMullan yesterday denied a motion for a new trial for Thomas Walter Higginbotham, convicted Saturday night of second degree murder in connection with the death of Martin Tabert. The case probably will now go to the supreme court. Higginbotham, who was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment, is out on bonds of $10,000, pending his appeal to the supreme court.

Sentencing of Higginbotham yesterday by Judge McMullan set a precedent for a sentence on a Sunday. Following Higginbotham's conviction Saturday his counsel immediately announced they would file a motion for a new trial. Judge McMullan yesterday denied this motion. The judge said he had been advised the case would be taken to the state supreme court and Higginbotham was released on $10,000 bond until the higher court disposes of the case.

Today Higginbotham and his wife and four children were back in their home at Green Cove Springs, Fla. Attorneys for the Tabert family declared after the conviction a damage suit for from $50,000 to $100,000 would be filed against the Putnam Lumber Company as a result of Martin Tabert's death.

HIGGINBOTHAM GUILTY

Lake City, Fla., July 9.—Thomas Walter Higginbotham last Saturday was found guilty of murder of Martin Tabert, of North Dakota in the second degree by a jury here. The jury was out one hour and twenty minutes.

Higginbotham was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment. He was released on $10,000 bond pending hearing of appeal.

The former convict whipping boss was accused of having caused the death of Tabert as the result of a beating administered while the North Dakotan was serving a term in the Putnam Lumber company convict lease camp. The trial consumed thirteen days.

The death of Tabert finally resulted in an investigation of the whole leasing system and its abolishment by the Florida legislature. That body also prohibited corporal punishment. Before the Florida legislature convened, the senate of North Dakota adopted a memorial asking the Florida lawmakers to investigate the death of Tabert.

Higginbotham in Court

There was no demonstration in the court room when the verdict was reported. Attorneys for the defendant immediately made a motion for a new trial. The verdict carries a minimum sentence of twenty years and a maximum of life imprisonment. Higginbotham was in court when the jury announced its decision.

Higginbotham went on trial here thirteen days ago, the state charging him with having whipped Tabert so severely that it brought about traumatic pneumonia, which resulted in death four days after the whipping.

Defence admitted the whipping, but contended it was "within the law," basing this on testimony of a witness that only from eight to ten lashes were struck. The Florida convict camp regulations at that time permitted administering as many as ten lashes. The defence contended Tabert died from pneumonia, using the Putnam Lumber company's camp doctor T. Capers Jones, as a witness. He testified there were no signs of trauma on the body when he examined Tabert. Six expert witnesses corroborated Dr. Jones.

The case was bitterly fought, with four attorneys representing the state and six for the defendant. Charges were made by defense counsel that one of the state's witnesses had been offered a bribe to testify. This caused state's attorney James R. Kelly to declare he had been insulted and later provoked a near-fight between Leonidas E. Wade, chief counsel for the defense, and himself.

The defense further testified a "lash fund" had been raised in North Dakota to aid in the prosecution and pamphlets distributed among witnesses to prejudice them. Tabert was whipped while serving as a convict in the lumber company's camp, Jan. 27, 1922. The defense claimed he died on Feb. 2. G. Grimmon, assistant attorney general of North Dakota, investigated the death, sending several weeks in Florida.

On his return to North Dakota, he

The storm did damage estimated at $500,000. It started southwest of Carrington, and then passed to Cathay where it did considerable damage. Sykeston was missed and from there the path of the storm left north and east to Barlow, then eight miles north and east of Carrington and back to Carrington again.

It is estimated that between 100 and 150 barns were wrecked in that vicinity. A member of the Carrington Independent counted 11 of 13 barns wrecked between Sykeston and Cathay.

No persons, cattle or horses were killed.

Bank Is Damaged
The Foster County State Bank at Carrington was completely wrecked when a fire wall crashed into the roof, an assistant cashier, Guy Reed, barely escaping injury. The fire wall had been left standing since last fall when the building adjoining the bank was burned. There is but one wall of the Foster bank standing. The loss is estimated at $5,000.

The plate glass window of the J. C. Penney store was blown in and goods valued at $200 scattered over the city.

Two Elevators Blown Down
At Barlow where the greatest damage was done two elevators were blown over, and the roof of the third blown off.

A confectionery store there was completely wrecked. Only two houses in the whole area of the storm were wrecked, the fury of the storm seeming to be spent on the barns.

Part of the gable of the Barlow schoolhouse was blown off and two plate glass windows in the Covell store broken, with the result that the whole store and stock were soaked with an estimated damage of $1,000.

Turtle Lake, N. D., July 9.—A hail storm, east of Turtle Lake, struck about 12:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, bringing with it a down-pour that lasted forty minutes and was almost a cloudburst.

The Northern Pacific roundhouse was completely shattered, the Methodist church was twisted from its foundation, the front of the old hotel Windon, now occupied as a residence, was blown away, many windows were blown in and porches torn away.

Several barns were demolished and at least one farm house, that of Sander Anderson, 7 miles north of Turtle Lake, was demolished, according to information here.

No one was killed, according to reports at 11 a. m. today. Ed. H. Dahl of Mercer, east of Turtle Lake, was struck by flying timbers and seven stitches were necessary to close the wound.

The storm reached at least 15 miles north and 15 miles south of Turtle Lake, and to Mercer and McClusky, east of here.

The roof of the city water tank was blown off and many residences were damaged.

Two people, whose names were not learned, were badly damaged by flying glass.

The marine log elevator and runway was destroyed. Two inches of rain fell.

There was no damage south of Bismarck on the Soo lines, and Napoleon reported to the weather bureau there was no rain there.

GARRISON AREA

A heavy windstorm and hailstorm did great damage in the Garrison area Sunday afternoon, according to information received by Mrs. John Reuter of this city from her son last night. Telephone lines were reported down this morning.

There seemed to be two storms, one from the northwest and one from the southwest, which met over Turtle Lake and to the east, according to this information. It was reported the storm was heaviest at Turtle Lake and east at Mercer and Garrison.

One barn is known to have been blown over, that of Fritz Giffy, 3 miles west of Garrison.

The government thermometer showed 1.86 inches of rain fell.

The storm area was known to have extended 12 miles west of Garrison, 15 miles east and to the south.

To the west and northwest crops were completely ruined by hail, it was said, while south and southwest the damage ranged from 30 to 70 percent.

Y., July 7.—Alleged to have traded his two daughters and a son for a horse, a cow and a calf, Lark Thornington of Cortland was convicted yesterday of improper guardianship before Judge Campbell in children's court. THREE DIE IN AUTO CRASH

Machine Struck by Train Near Hillsboro

Fargo, July 7.—Three were killed and four were injured, one seriously fatally, when Great Northern passenger train No. 4 struck an automobile at Taft's Siding, three miles north of Hillsboro, about 4 p. m. yesterday.

Rev. W. H. Driver, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Hunter, and his wife were instantly killed; Arthur, their two and one-half year old son, was so badly injured that he died a few moments later; and Dr. E. Richter, his wife and baby, Ruth Alice, aged one and one-half years, and Audrey Driver, four-year-old daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Driver, were injured. Ruth Alice may not recover, attending physicians stated. All were from Hunter.

Details of the accident are somewhat vague, but it is generally believed that none of the party in the automobile saw the train until they reached the tracks. A large clearing at Taft's Siding obscures the view of the tracks. Dr. P. H. Burton, Fargo physician, who was on the train, declared.

NEW OIL REFUTES ANCIENT PROVERB

Wholly Distilled Oil Will Mix With Water, Say Modern Oil Experts

F. W. BEATTY
Marshall-Wells Co.

Oil men have discovered that one of the most valuable properties of a good motor oil is its ability to mix with water that finds its way into your crankcase. There is constant "sweating"—condensing of moisture—more in some cars than in others. Also scientists state that a gallon of water is formed every time a gallon of gasoline is consumed. Most of that water passes out the exhaust in the form of steam, but a part always remains. Hence the need for an oil that will render that water harmless.

It is possible to get an oil with this emulsifying property—a wholly distilled oil that will literally absorb water. There is a case on record of a leak in the cylinder wall of a motor which allowed considerable of the water from the cooling system to flow into the crankcase of a tractor. Any oil except an emulsifying oil would have failed in its job of protecting that motor against friction. Fortunately, the owner of the tractor had put in Sumner Motor Oil which absorbed that water to such an extent that cylinders were not scored, nor bearings burned out although the engine became terribly overheated due to lack of water in the cooling system.

Such a case as the above is an extreme example of the usefulness of the emulsifying oil, but every motor has a certain amount of water in the crankcase at all times. This should be compensated for by the oil. If the oil does not take care of that water, friction is the inevitable result and the inevitable result of friction as every motorist knows is repair bills.

It will pay you to get an oil with the emulsifying property. Such an oil is pretty likely to be a pure, wholly distilled product. Get what the lubrication experts call "straight-run" oil. There is nothing better for your motor or your purse.

WOULD TAKE MEASURES TO PEOPLES VOTE

Oklahoma City, July 7.—Plans for "going to the people" with five farmer-labor measures which the recent Oklahoma legislature failed to enact were to be discussed at a meeting here today of the executive board of the Farmer-Labor Reconstruction League.

These measures were suggested for consideration: An act creating a state cement plant, a gross receipts tax, legislation establishing a state or cooperative banking system, a "fair" election law, an act exempting from taxation property improvements to the amount of $1,000. J. Luber Langdon, league manager, pointed out that Governor Walton has urged the use of the initiative as the best means of obtaining enactment of legislation sponsored by the farmer-labor group.

PHYSICIAN IS OWN JUDGE OF LIQUOR NEEDS

Way Not Be Limited in Prescribing for Medicinal Use, Is Decision

Helena, Mont., July 7.—Congress having conferred upon physicians the discretionary right of prescribing liquor, cannot regulate the amount a physician may prescribe, federal judge G. M. Bourquin held in substance today in a decision.

With reference to the maximum amount of liquor which the prohibition enforcement law states may be prescribed to any one patient, Judge Bourquin declared portions of the law unconstitutional for the reason that patients are not alike, diseases are dissimilar and so the dosage cannot be fixed arbitrarily.

The court decision holds as invalid and unconstitutional those portions of the federal prohibition enforcement act which limits the number of whisky prescriptions a physician may write and the quantity of whisky which he may prescribe for any one person in a given period.

The court dismissed the three counts against Dr. J. B. Freund of Butte.

"It is an extravagant and unreasonable attempt to subordinate the judgment of the attending physician to that of congress in respect to matters with which the federal government is competent to deal, and infringe upon the duty of the physician to prescribe in accord with his honest judgment and upon the right of the patient to receive the benefit of the judgment of the physician of his choice," the decision said.

KIDDER CO. PIONEER DIES

S. E. Kepler, of Dawson, Succumbs to Heart Trouble

S. E. Kepler, prominent citizen of Kidder county, died in Dawson Saturday, July 7 as a result of heart trouble and complications. He had been ailing for the past year and was under treatment at a local hospital recently. The deceased who was 67 years of age has taken a leading part in the social, religious and business life since his arrival in North Dakota.

Samuel Elwood Kepler was born in Pennsylvania, Aug. 1, 1856 and came to North Dakota in October, 1880, settling at Dawson where he has since resided.

In 1881 he organized with Raymond Brothers, the firm of Raymond and Kepler, which was the first general merchandise firm in Kidder county. They carried on this business for over 35 years, doing the largest business between Jamestown and Bismarck.

Mr. Kepler was intensely loyal to North Dakota, Kidder county and his home town. He was one of the first trustees of the Congregational Church of Dawson, a power for good in all the best things of life. He was successful in business and always reliable and respected by those with whom he came in contact and his long residence here and prominence made his friends and acquaintances state wide.

He was intensely devoted to his home. In 1884, only four years after his settlement here he returned to Pennsylvania and returned with his young bride, Miss Naylor, with whom he lived in the closest unity and affection for 33 years until her death in 1918. To them two sons were born, one Donald dying some years ago and John Fairies Kepler now residing in Naukan, Iowa. Mrs. Kepler and Donald resided in the cemetery at San Diego, Cal. where the husband and father will be laid beside them.

Russian Homes For Children Show Marked Improvement As Americans Raise Standards

The American Relief Administration is leaving Russia, but it is leaving behind food enough to care for its several million of rescued children for the hungry months between the time of its departure and the harvesting of the great grain crops that are sure to yield Russia food enough to feed its entire population and probably leave a surplus for export.

Incidentally the American Relief Administration is leaving in every Russian city for the walls and orphanages, in a far better condition than it found them. There are sheets and blankets on the beds, supplied by the A. R. A., there are medicines in the medicine closets, and there is soap. It is wonderful what a difference a few tons of soap will make in a children's home, even a Russian children's home, particularly if an inspector drops in occasionally to report on whether or not the soap is being effectively used.

The home where the above pictures were taken is known as the "Second Child City" at Odessa. One picture shows a few of the 1600 children which the American Relief Administration has been feeding in this particular institution, and the other shows some of the girls at the home busily fashioning garments from material contributed by the American Baptists through the A. R. A.

In addition to its feeding, the A. R. A. has supplied this particular home with 900 blankets, 650 sheets, 300 pillow cases, 500 children's gowns, 900 yards of muslin, 880 towels, 600 pounds of cod liver oil, 2,644 pounds of soap, 1,000 pounds of calcium chlorinate, to say nothing of other disinfectants, first-aid equipment, bandages and medicines. And this is only one of some 16,000 institutions, including hospitals, that the A. R. A. has equipped and supplied with such necessities. Had it not been for the aid extended many of them would have been forced to close their doors. But perhaps even more important than these tangible gifts of supplies and food, is the better management that the A. R. A. has brought about, through its careful and frequent inspections and its grading of the various institutions by which higher standards of sanitation have been set and better care secured for the patients and inmates.

EDISON-FORD PLAN UNFAIR TO FARMER

Third Article Shows How Credit Test Would Fail Him in His Need.

The unfairness to the farmer of the Edison-Ford "commodity money" scheme, although ostensibly aimed to improve his economic position, is discussed in the present article, which is the third in a series prepared by the American Bankers Association, reviewing the exposure of the weaknesses of the plan as presented by William T. Foster, Director of the Pollack Foundation for Economic Research.

Briefly, the plan, sponsored by Thomas Edison and Henry Ford, would provide for Government warehousing of basic commodities, against which currency would be loaned, during storage, to the producer without interest, up to half the average value of the products for the previous twenty-five years. On the other half of the value the producer would receive certificates which he could sell or use for bank loans.

Restricted Credit
In that provision allowing for Government loans only up to half the average value for twenty-five years Mr. Foster finds particular weakness in the scheme. He points out that prices have risen so high since 1896 that the farmer could borrow on most products much less than half the present value of the products—much less, in fact, than he could borrow directly from the banks. Loans on the other half the value, which would be on virtually a second mortgage basis, he says, would not be desirable for the banks.

"The plan is not fair even to farmers; it involves unjust discrimination," Mr. Foster says.

"The Edison plan fixes the loan values of all products absolutely, uniformly and arbitrarily. It ignores the relative prospects of different commodity markets. Only by the merest chance would such a method give a fair loan valuation. Fifty per cent of the average price for the previous twenty-five years would be too high for some commodities and too low for most of them. With such details the Edison plan is not concerned."

Banks Fairer to Farmers

"The general practice of the banks is not only fairer to farmers, but it is sounder business. There is no justification for basing the loan value of anything upon average prices in past years. Sound banking practice looks to the future. A bank for the protection of its depositors, if for no other reason—must consider above everything the prospects of getting its money back. And a farmer's prospects of repaying a loan from the sale of his product depend entirely on future prices, not at all on past prices. Last year's runs do not count in this year's game."

As to the claim that the Edison plan would curb speculation in farm products, Mr. Foster says:

"There is nothing in the Edison plan that would tend to abolish speculation. Even after the farmer had stored his products and obtained a loan from the Government, he would still be free to sell his products outright to speculators. The farmer would have all the inducements to sell that he has today, and speculators would have all the inducements to buy."

"Clearly, then, the Edison plan would not provide a money that is sounder than gold money; it would not provide a money less subject to fluctuation in value; it would not enable farmers to obtain larger loans than they can now obtain; it would not divorce agriculture from the banking system; and it would not eliminate speculation in farm products."

MRS. LEARY SAYS SHE HATED TO GO TO TABLE

"I couldn't possibly have expected more than Tanlac has done for me," said Mrs. Arthur H. Leary, of 3406 St. Paul Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., recently.

"I had stomach trouble so bad I dreaded to sit down to the table because no matter how sparingly I ate, I suffered torture from sourness, gas, bloating and shortness on breath. I got so I could hardly eat anything and I lost weight and became so weak that a half hour at housework tired me more than a half day's work tires me now. I had splitting headaches, too, and was so nervous I couldn't get a restful night's sleep."

"But these troubles are only a memory with me now. I am again eating and sleeping fine, have gained several pounds, and am feeling perfectly well and happy. It's a pleasure to praise Tanlac for I don't know of any better way to help people who suffer than to get them to take the medicine."

WITH "SPICE OF 1922"

Gorgeous in its scenic investiture, hilarious in its comedy, keen in its satire, "Spice of 1922," the sensation of the season, which occupied the boards of the New York Winter Garden last summer and startled Broadway with its magnitude and magnificence, will be offered at the Auditorium July 11. It is now presented by Edward L. Bloom and sets a high mark for future production effort. Mr. Bloom is general manager of the Winter Garden.

A company of 100 people, including a specially trained chorus of forty, is necessary for the big production, which is on a scale seldom seen outside of the largest of the New York theaters. The principals include practically the entire original company and the scenic investiture which will be staged here is the original, calling for the services of a small army of stage mechanics.

Musical comedy favorites and vaudeville headliners such as El Brendel and Flo Bert, Georgie Price, Arman Kaliz, Sam Hearn, Florence Browne, Johnny Benkes, Alice Ridnor, Betty Jones, Martha Thropp and Arthur Carey head the cast which also includes such well known people as Thomas Morris, Evelyn Downing, James Taylor, Elsie Wachtel, Dolores Suarez, Alice Harris, Eddie Fox and Maris Chaney. The chorus is particularly attractive. It is a well known fact that they had much to do with the original success of the production at the Winter Garden.

Jack Lait, who wrote the book and lyrics of "Spice," is the famous author, playwright, newspaper man, war correspondent, critic, et al and he has written a profusion of clever lines and skits that make this offering stand out for its satire and humor to say nothing of the topical sallies.

The entire production of "Spice" book, music, lyrics, costumes, scenery, dancing and staging—is of a Tiffany lustre and moves at the highest possible speed. No scene lasts more than three or four minutes and there is no "stalling" between scenes, of which there are more than thirty in "Spice."

Although it is American in its speed and pep, "Spice" has a French atmosphere of color and design. It is seemingly the object of the producers to stage comedy in the most elaborate of surroundings and in this, according to the advance reports, they succeeded in the fullest measure.

How Business Depression Tests Good-Will

Many a manufacturer during the past two years has had an opportunity to measure as never before the real worth of his advertising investment.

He has seen his trade - marked line keep up in sales and his unadvertised goods shrink to a small fraction of their former volume. Innumerable instances could be cited.

Dealers can tell a similar story. The number of makes carried of each item have shrunk to a very few—the best known and most frequently called for. Dealers have changed their point of view; they no longer stock lightly with many brands, but substantially with a few.

Quick turnover is their only salvation in a depression and their real source of profit in a prosperous period.

KIDDER CO. PIONEER DIES

S. E. Kepner, of Dawson, Succumbs to Heart Trouble

S. E. Kepner, prominent citizen of Kidder county, died in Dawson Saturday, July 7 as a result of heart trouble and complications. He had been ailing for the past year and was under treatment at a local hospital recently. The deceased who was 67 years of age has taken a leading part in the social, religious and business life since his arrival in North Dakota.

Samuel Elwood Kepner was born in Pennsylvania, Aug. 1, 1866 and came to North Dakota in October, 1880, settling at Dawson where he has since resided.

In 1881 he organized with Raymond Brothers, the firm of Raymond and Kepner, which was the first general merchandise firm in Kidder County. He carried on this business for over 35 years, doing the largest business between Jamestown and Bismarck.

Mr. Kepner was intensely loyal to North Dakota, Kidder County and his home town. He was one of the first trustees of the Congregational Church of Dawson, a power for good in all the best things of life. He was successful in business and always reliable and respected by those with whom he came in contact and his long residence here and prominence made his friends and acquaintances state wide.

He was intensely devoted to his home. In 1884, only four years after his settlement here he returned to Pennsylvania and returned with his young bride, Miss Abbie Naylor, with whom he lived the closest unity and affection for 33 years until her death in 1918. To them two sons were born, one Donald, dying some years ago and John Fairies Kepner now residing in Naukan, Iowa. Mrs. Kepner and Donald rest in the cemetery at San Diego, Cal. where the husband and father will be laid beside them.

Funeral services will be held at the home of the deceased Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The remains will be taken to San Diego by John F. Kepner, son of the deceased, and Miss Maggie Naylor of Dawson, sister-in-law.

Owen of Mandan, and Rev. S. P. Halford of Bismarck officiating. A large crowd of friends were present to pay their tribute to their friend.

Burke Willing To Appear in Trial

New York, July 9.—John Burke, former treasurer of the United States, three times governor of North Dakota, and a member of the defunct brokerage firm of Aardot and Burke today appeared at the office of District Attorney Stanton offering to waive immunity and appear before the grand jury as well as aid the prosecution in every way he could. He said he was "broken" having lost everything in the failure.

Russian Homes For Children Show Marked Improvement As Americans Raise Standards

The American Relief Administration is leaving Russia, but it is leaving behind food enough to care for its several million of rescued children for the hungry months between the time of its departure and the harvesting of the great grain crops that are sure to yield Russia food enough to feed the entire population and probably leave a surplus for export.

Incidentally the American Relief Administration is leaving the children's homes, maintained in every Russian city for the waifs and orphans, in a far better condition than it found them. There are sheets and blankets on the beds, supplied by the A. R. A., there are medicines in the medicine closets, and there is soap. It is wonderful what a difference a few tons of soap will make in a children's home, even a Russian children's home, even a "Second Child City" at Odessa. One picture shows a few of the 1600 children which the American Relief Administration has been feeding in this particular institution, and the other shows some of the girls at the home busily fashioning garments from material contributed by the American Baptists through the A. R. A.

In addition to its feeding, the A. R. A. has supplied this particular home with 900 blankets, 650 sheets, 800 pillow cases, 800 children's gowns, 500 yards of muslin, 880 towels, 500 pounds of cod liver oil, 2,544 pounds of soap, 1,000 pounds of calcium chlorinate, to say nothing of other disinfectants, first-aid equipment, bandages and medicines. And this is only one of some 15,000 institutions, including hospitals, that the A. R. A. has equipped and supplied with such necessities. Had it not been for the aid extended many of them would have been forced to close their doors. But perhaps even more important than these tangible gifts of supplies and of food, is the better management that the A. R. A. has brought about, through its careful and frequent inspections and its grading of the various institutions by which higher standards of sanitation have been set and better care secured for the patients and inmates.

EDISON-FORD PLAN UNFAIR TO FARMER

Third Article Shows How Credit Test Would Fail Him in His Need

The unfairness to the farmer of the Edison-Ford "commodity money" scheme, although ostensibly aimed to improve his economic position, is discussed in the present article, which is the third in a series prepared by the American Bankers Association, reviewing the exposure of the weaknesses of the plan as presented by William T. Foster, Director of the Pollack Foundation for Economic Research.

Briefly, the plan, sponsored by Thomas Edison and Henry Ford, would provide for Government warehousing of basic commodities, against which currency would be loaned, during storage, to the producer without interest, up to half the average value of the products for the previous twenty-five years. On the other half of the value the producer would receive certificates which he could sell or use for bank loans.

MRS. LEARY SAYS SHE HATED TO GO TO TABLE

"I couldn't possibly have expected more than Tanlac has done for me," said Mrs. Arthur H. Leary, of 3406 St. Paul Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., recently.

"I had stomach trouble so bad I dreaded to sit down to the table because no matter how sparingly I ate, I suffered torture from sourness, gas, bloating and shortness of breath. I got so I could hardly eat anything and I lost weight and became so weak that a half hour at housework tired me more than a half day's work tires me now. I had spitting headaches, too, and was so nervous I couldn't get a restful night's sleep. But these troubles are only a memory with me now. I am again eating and sleeping fine, have gained several pounds, and am feeling perfectly well and happy. It's a pleasure to praise Tanlac for I don't know of any better way to help people who suffer than to get them to take the medicine."

Tanlac Vegetable Pills are nature's own remedy for constipation. For sale everywhere.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

HIGGINBOTHAM GUILTY

With the conviction of Thomas Walter Higginbotham of the murder of Martin Tabert of North Dakota, the final episode of that boy's martyrdom passes into history. But the condemnation of Florida's system becomes a living force, a constant warning against another reversion to the brutality of the dark ages when men were lashed and tortured upon the slightest pretext.

Tabert's death uncovered the whole sordid system that put its blot on Florida's officialdom. The removal of the sheriff and the judges who acted as recruiting agents for lumber companies seeking cheap camp labor driven under a whipping boss was a mild punishment for the men who aggravated the crime.

In how many other places of industry does cruelty stalk? It takes a wave of public opinion and the pounding of the press to uncover these industrial abuses, but when once these forces come into action for public weal no power can withstand them.

Tabert died, but he died not in vain. Cut down in the exuberance of youth in a foul lumber camp, his sacrifice has saved countless others from a like fate and cleansed the penal system of Florida from a practice which no one could defend.

SKEETERS

Do you know anything quite as stupid as a mosquito? She comes buzzing around you, her hypodermic nicely sharpened. You swing for her—and miss, nine times out of ten. Now, you are about 18,000 times as big as a mosquito. If a strange beast 18,000 times as large as you suddenly swung a giant arm to crush you, you'd have sense enough to start in the opposite direction, pronto.

But not so with Mrs. Mosquito. She comes right back, zzzzzing all the louder, and makes another try for your anatomy—preferably the neck. Maybe, after you've chased her half a dozen times, she'll stay away for a minute until you're off your guard. Then she returns—probably to death if she makes a successful landing and begins sinking her hypodermic.

The military mind would call the mosquito's repeated charges at her prey heroism in the face of terrific odds. We call it stupidity—outright boneheadedness. And we have even seen mosquitoes alight on an auto that has just stopped and try to sink their hypodermics, in the belief that there must be blood inside this steel beast with the baked-enamel skin.

Somehow we can't help comparing the mosquito's intelligence with the mental tendencies of many individuals and the so-called human race in general.

A lot of us are like the mosquito, escaping from disaster only to return inquisitively for another flirtation with trouble. Like the drunkard returning to his cups, the dieting fat man to his box of candy, the saved-by-a-hair motorist to another fling at high speed.

Through many generations, humanity has learned by bitter experience the things to avoid. But it returns over and over again to danger, like the moth to the candle, the mosquito to the swinging blow of its intended victim.

Our generation recently learned that war doesn't pay. We might have learned as much from disasters by previous generations. But that isn't human nature. We ignored the experience of the past. And within half a century a future generation will be ignoring what we learned—and be ready to pound the drum, wave the flag, fall into line and march off to death.

The psychology of all this is that each new generation thinks it has a corner on wisdom, and that the old folks belong to an obsolete era—"they don't understand how things have changed."

After all, there are very few dangers lurking for us. Our ancestors, nursing their bruises, left plenty of warning signs along the path, telling us how to keep out of poverty, most sickness and personal entanglements. They might as well have saved their time and carried their knowledge to the grave with them. When Smart Aleck newcomers can't find any other way to ridicule the heritage of wisdom from the past, they call it "platitudes."

PRICES

Cost of living now is about three-fifths higher than it was when the war started in 1914, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. This is, of course, an average figure for the whole country and varies with locality—higher in some places and lower in others. Most of us will agree that we live in one of the "higher" localities.

However, the three-fifths-higher estimate is logical, since it covers actual cost of living (necessities including necessary recreation) for a wage earner with five in family. Our real increase in cost of living is largely in our increased demand for luxuries—what Jim Hill called "the cost of high living."

LIARS

A New York woman, charged with obtaining $2000 worth of goods from a department store under false pretenses, is saved from a prison term by physicians who testify that she is a "pathological liar."

To most people, this is something new under the sun—that the chronic liar may be merely a victim of diseased mentality. Lying is the result of effervescent imagination, whether the fibbing is harmless or cunningly purposeful. And effervescent imagination is usually an endocrine-gland disturbance—excessive secretion by the thyroid gland in the neck. Nearly all writers are pathological liars.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

After the Nosey had left them, Mister Sky Bow asked Nancy and Nick if they would like to see where the Earsies lived.

"Are they some live-in Rainbow Land?" asked Nancy.

"Yes!" nodded the little fairy man. "And a happier crowd you never saw, although they are not very happy."

So they went along past several queer houses and other queer things and by 'n by they heard a noise.

"Isn't that awful!" remarked Nancy. "What is it?"

"It's the Earsies singing themselves to sleep," said Mister Sky Bow. "We'll have to hurry."

So they hurried as fast as they could go.

And on turning a corner they came to the place the Earsies were. But all they saw was a hundred hammocks swinging this way and that.

"Hello!" called Mister Sky Bow loudly.

Instantly all the Earsies stopped swinging and singing and sat up. But they looked so funny the Twins could hardly keep from laughing.

For the ears of these queer little folk were so large they stuck out on each side of their heads like sails.

"Come on fellows, we've got company," called one, and with that every little Earsy jumped out of his hammock bed and came up to shake hands.

"Where are your ears?" asked one when everybody said how d' do to the visitors.

"Here under our bobbed hair," said Nancy, showing him.

"Too bad!" said the Earsy. "There are so many things you can't hear with such little ones."

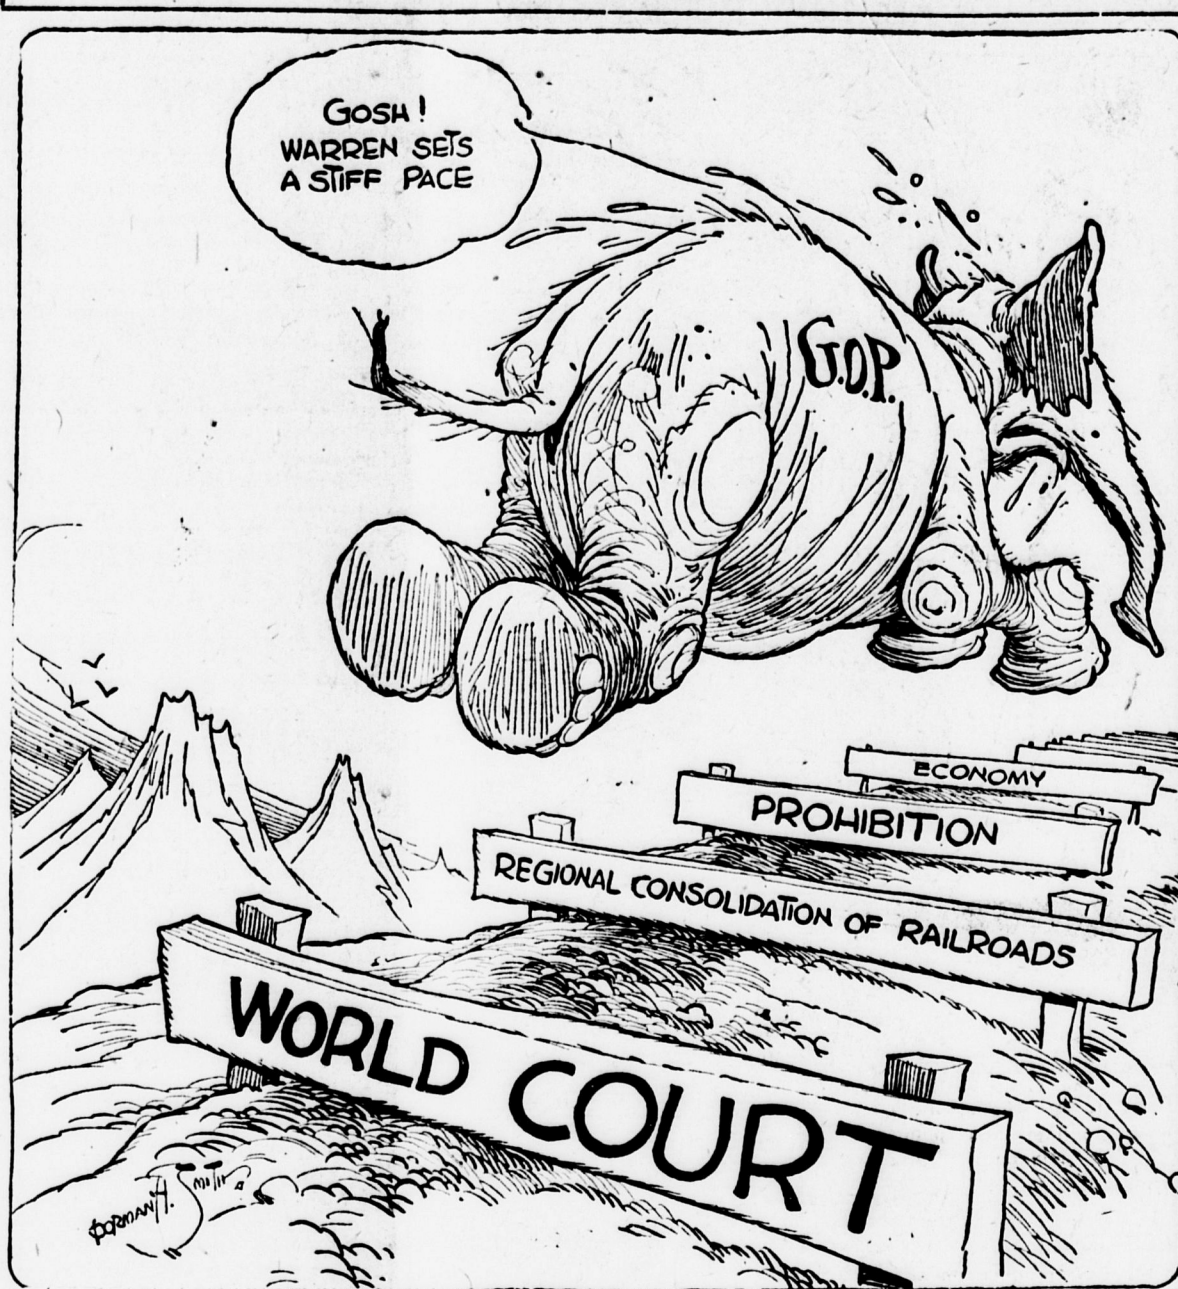

"Storm," said Nick laughing, "a thunder storm," said Jack Frost is around," added Nancy.

"Oh, we don't mind them," said the little Earsies, running back to their hammocks. "Goodbye."

GOOD INTENTIONS

LETTER FROM SALLY ATHONTON TO MR. JOSEPH GRAVES

HAMILTON

MY DEAR MR. HAMILTON:

Upon your generosity and that of my other friends to me, no one need ever tell me that this world is not full of kind-hearted and sympathetic people.

I cannot write you all that is in my heart, but I will accept the check which Leslie sent me from you and you will be glad to know that there is great hope of Sam getting back his sight.

One of the greatest eye specialists in the country is coming to see him tomorrow, but I think that whatever he may say to him, it will not do him any more good than the words you said to him through Leslie—that if he recovered his sight, you would find a place for him in your business. It has given him an incentive to live.

Dear Mr. Hamilton, all I can say is that both Sam and I hope you will get what you deserve while you live and can enjoy it.

Sincerely and gratefully yours,

SALLY

Letter From Mrs. Joseph Graves Hamilton to Her Daughter, Mrs. Leslie Prescott.

I am inclosing a letter from Sally Athonton written to your father. I've rarely seen your father so touched as he was by it.

I am glad, my dear child, that you are coming home before we have to leave and from what you have written me, I think that John's mother must be rather a selfish woman.

You know, my dear child, that there are mothers and mothers. Some mothers give all and some mothers ask all. I have always tried to steer toward a middle course.

I have tried to give my children everything that would make them happy, but I have also tried not to be so indulgent that I would hurt the strength and stamina of their character.

It is said that a selfish mother makes an unselfish daughter and vice versa.

I am going to tell you a secret, my dear Leslie. I think there are some cases where unselfishness ceases to be a virtue.

Kindness of heart and a sympathetic mind is much to be desired, but I have sometimes thought that these people who are particularly unselfish and who give in to the wants and desires and prejudices of some one who is narrow minded, selfish and prejudiced, are too lazy to stand up for their own, too indolent to make a stand which would be better not only for themselves but for the dear child who asks so much.

Your little apartment is perfectly lovely. You have shown a discriminating taste that makes me very proud of you and I am quite sure that John loves it as much as you do.

I told me with great pride that he had not seen the place until it was all finished. I expect you did not tell him how much it cost as men never have any idea of the amount of money such things cost unless they are in the business of selling them.

John's friend, Sydney Carton, is due here tomorrow morning and we shall hope to see you the day after you get this letter.

Bear with your husband's mother's idiosyncrasies, my dear. From what John tells me she has lived alone almost all of her life and that is apt to make one both crabbed and suspicious.

Lovingly,

YOUR MOTHER.

PUREBRED SIRE CAMPAIGNS

To promote the production of good grade and purebred dairy cattle, the agricultural departments of two railways, the Northern Colorado and the Denver and North Western, are cooperating with the extension department of the state college in a plan to trade purebred dairy sire for every scrub sire brought to a special purebred sire special train during its tour of the state.

What farmer would not welcome the chance for a good trade of the kind, and what breeder would not become a convert to the advisability of keeping a purebred sire of good milk-producing ancestry instead of a scrub of poor and unknown ancestry?

Just how far the proposal can be worked out is a question, but the suggestion has good possibilities. A purebred sire campaign is being contemplated at the present time in North Dakota. Possibly the Colorado plan offers a suggestion as a supplement to a better sire drive.—Fargo Daily Tribune.

"The outstanding personality of the National Wheat Conference in Chicago was Governor Nestos of North Dakota. He presided at the evening session. He won the admiration of all by his genial manner, ready wit and common sense in all his remarks."—From Warren Minnesota Sheaf.

AT THE MOVIES

THE ELTINGE

A rough and tumble fight of two lads, resulting in one of the bitterest fights ever waged in the Cumberland Mountains of Kentucky, is a feature of Mary Miles Minter's latest Paramount picture, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which shows at the Eltinge Theatre today and tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday.

The actors of the play fight on the scene and separate the lads with some difficulty. Then the better halves of both families arrive. The fathers start a warm argument over the cause of the boys' fighting and the mothers begin to take up the quarrel. What ensues constitutes one of the most thrilling photo dramas of the current season. Antonio Moreno, featured as leading man, and Ernest Torrence head an unusually fine supporting cast of players.

CHAPTER XII

Peter Takes the Helm.

As the detectives traveled through night-hidden Kent and presently boarded the packet for Boulogne, Mark Brendon told his story with every detail for the benefit of Mr. Gann.

They chatted until the dawn, by which time their train had reached Paris, and an hour or two later they were on their way to Italy.

Mr. Gann had determined to cross the Lakes and arrive unexpectedly at Menaggio. He had now turned his mind once more to the problem before him and spoke but little.

He said with his notebook open and made an occasional entry as he pursued his thoughts.

He looked up presently. "The hard thing before us is this," he said, "to get into touch with Robert Redmayne, or his ghost. There are two sorts of ghost, Mark; the real thing—in which you don't believe and concerning which I hold a watching brief; and the manufactured article."

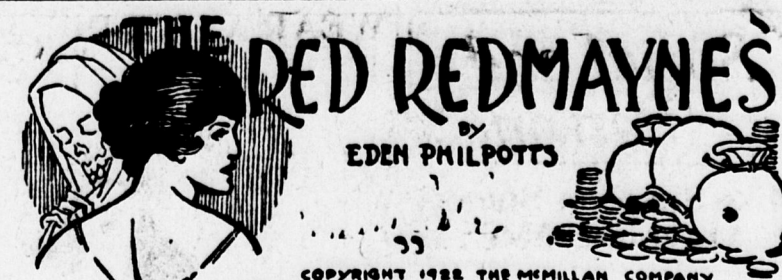

He broke off and changed the subject. "What I'm doing is to compare your verbal statement with Mr. Redmayne's written communication," he said, patting his book.

"You'll find the story of Robert Redmayne from childhood and the story of the girl, his niece, and of her dead father, Mrs. Doria's father was a rough customer—scorpions to Robert's whips apparently—a man a bit out of the common."

"I shall like to read the report."

"It's valuable to us, because written without prejudice. That's where it beats your very lucid account."

Playing opposite Gladys Walton is Vernon Steele. Others who have important parts in the supporting cast are William Burress, Al Hart, Mart B. Robbins, Nelson McDowell, Lloyd Whitlock and Anna Herman-

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Michael Pendean disappears and Robert Redmayne, uncle of Michael's wife, Jenny, is suspected of the murder. Mark Brendon, criminal investigator, has charge of the case.

Jenny goes to live with her uncle, Bendigo Redmayne. Robert appears near Bendigo's home and sends word to Bendigo to meet him in a nearby cave. Giuseppe Doria, who works for Bendigo, leaves his master at the meeting place. When Doria calls to bring Bendigo home he finds the cave empty and signs of a terrible struggle.

Jenny marries Doria and they go to live in Italy, where Jenny's uncle, Albert Redmayne, lives. Robert is seen in Italy and Albert sends for Brendon and for Peter Gann, famous American detective and dear friend to Albert.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
"You're a detective inspector of Scotland Yard," continued Gann, "and Scotland Yard is still the high-water mark of police organization in the world. The Central Bureau in New York is pretty close up, and I've nothing but admiration for the French and Italian Secret Services; but the fact remains: The Yard is first; and you've won, and fairly won your place there. That's a big thing and you didn't get it without some work and some luck, Brendon."

But now—this Redmayne racket. In a word, your conduct of the affair don't square with your reputation. Your dope never cut any ice from the start."

Brendon did not hide his emotion, but kept silence while Mr. Gann helped himself to a pinch of snuff.

"A great many of your 'cast-iron facts' were no facts at all," said Gann. "What were they then?"

"Elaborate and deliberate fictions, Mark."

He paused again, applied himself to his gold box, and then proceeded. "Now see how reason bears on the evidence of Robert Redmayne and his trick acts since first he disappeared. A thing occurs and there are only certain ways—very limited in number—to explain it. Either Robert Redmayne killed Michael Pendean, or else he did not. And if he did, he was sane or insane at the time. That much can't be denied and is granted. If he was sane, he committed the murder with a motive; and pretty careful inquiry proves that no motive existed. Then, assuming him to be sane, he would not have committed such a murder. The alternative is that he was mad at the time and did homicide on Pendean while out of his mind."

"But what happens to a madman after a crime of this sort? Does he get off with it and wander over Europe as a free man for a year? Granted the resources of maniacal cunning and all the rest of it, was it ever heard that a lunatic went at large as this man did, and laughed at Scotland Yard's attempt to run him down and capture him? No, Mark, the man responsible for these impossible things isn't mad. And that brings me back to my preliminary alternative."

"I said just now, 'Either Robert Redmayne killed Michael Pendean, or else he did not.' And we may add that either Robert Redmayne killed Bendigo Redmayne, or else he did not. But we'll stick to the first proposition for the moment. And the next question you must ask yourself is this: 'Did Robert Redmayne kill Michael Pendean?' That's where your 'facts,' as you call them, begin to sag a bit, my son. There's only one sure and certain way of knowing that a man is dead; and that is by seeing his body and convincing the law by the testimony of those who knew the man in life, that the corpse belongs to him and nobody else."

They chatted for half an hour and Mr. Gann attained his object, which was to fling his companion back to the beginning of the whole problem that had brought them together.

"Tonight, in the train," said Peter. "I shall ask you to give me your version of the case from the moment that Mrs. Pendean invited you to take it up."

den. There was something running through your story, like a thread of silk in cotton, that you won't find here. It challenged me from the jump, my boy, and I'm inclined to think that in that thread of silk I shall just find the reason of your failure, before I've wound it up."

"I don't understand you, Gann," said Gann. "You wouldn't—not yet. But we'll change the metaphor. We'll say there was a red herring drawn across the trail, and that you took the bait and, having started right enough, presently forsook the right scent for the wrong."

Brendon made no reply. Neither his conscience nor his wit threw any light on the point. Then Peter, turning to his notes, touched on a minor incident and showed the other that it admitted of a doubt.

"Do you remember the night you left 'Crow's Nest' after your first visit? On the way back to Dartmouth you suddenly saw Robert Redmayne standing by a gate; and when the moonlight revealed you to him, he leaped away and disappeared into the trees. Why?"

"He knew me."

"How?"

"We had met at Princetown and we had spoken together for some minutes by the pool in Fogginton Quarry, where I was fishing."

"That's right. But he didn't know who you were then. Even if he'd remembered meeting you six months before in the dusk at Fogginton, why should he think you were a man who was hunting him?"

Mark reflected. "That's true," he said.

Peter did not pursue the subject. He shut his book, yawned, took snuff, and declared himself ready for a meal. The long day passed and both men turned in early and slept till daybreak.

Before noon they had left Baveno on a steamer and were crossing the blue depths of Maggiore.

At Luino they left the steamer and proceeded to Tresa.

They wound over Lugano and came in evening light to its northern shore. Then once more they took train, climbed aloft, and fell at last to Menaggio on Como's brink.

"Now," said Peter, "I guess we'll leave our traps here and beat it to Villa Pianazzo right away."

Within twenty minutes their one-horse vehicle had reached Mr. Redmayne's modest home and they found three persons just about to take an evening meal. Simultaneously there appeared Mr. Redmayne, his niece, and Giuseppe Doria; and while Albert, Italian fashion, embraced Mr. Gann and planted a kiss upon his cheek, Jenny greeted Mark Brendon and he looked once more into her eyes.

Doria held back a little while his wife welcomed her uncle's friend; then he came forward, declared his pleasure at meeting Mark again and his belief that time would soon reveal the truth and set a period to the sinister story of the wanderer.

Mr. Redmayne was overjoyed at seeing Gann and quite forgot the object of his visit in the pleasure of receiving him.

"It has been my last and abiding ambition to introduce you to Virginia Poggi, dear Peter, so that you, he and I may sit together, hear each other's voices and look into each other's eyes."

Jenny and Assunta had hastily prepared for the visitors and now upon his supper and Brendon learned that roomers were already taken for him and Mr. Gann at the Hotel Victoria.

"That's as may be," he declared to Doria's wife. "You

HIGGINBOTHAM GUILTY
With the conviction of Thomas Walter Higginbotham of the murder of Martin Tabert of North Dakota, the final episode of that boy's martyrdom passes into history. But the condemnation of Florida's system becomes a living force, a constant warning against another reversion to the brutality of the dark ages when men were lashed and tortured upon the slightest pretext.
Tabert's death uncovered the whole sordid system that put its blot on Florida's officialdom. The removal of the sheriff and the judges who acted as recruiting agents for companies seeking cheap camp labor driven under a whipping boss was a mild punishment for the men who aggravated the crime.
In how many other places of industry does cruelty stalk? It takes a wave of public opinion and the pounding of the press to uncover these industrial abuses, but when once these forces come into action for public weal no power can withstand them.
Tabert died, but he died not in vain. Cut down in the exuberance of youth in a foul lumber camp, his sacrifice has saved countless others from a like fate and cleansed the penal system of Florida from a practice which no one could defend.

SKEETERS
Do you know anything quite as stupid as a mosquito? She comes buzzing around you, her hypodermic nicely sharpened. You swing for her—and miss, nine times out of ten. Now, you are about 18,000 times as big as a mosquito. If a strange beast 18,000 times as large as you suddenly swung a giant arm to crush you, you'd have sense enough to start in the opposite direction, pronto.
But not so with Mrs. Mosquito.
She comes right back, zzzzzing all the louder, and makes another try for your anatomy—preferably the neck. Maybe, after you've chased her half a dozen times, she'll stay away for a minute until you're off your guard. Then she returns—probably to death if she makes a successful landing and begins sinking her hypodermic.
The military mind would call the mosquito's repeated charges at her prey heroism in the face of terrific odds. We call it stupidity—outright boneheadedness. And we have even seen mosquitoes alight on an auto that has just stopped and try to sink their hypodermics, in the belief that there must be blood inside this steel beast with the baked-enamel skin.
Somehow we can't help comparing the mosquito's intelligence with the mental tendencies of many individuals and the so-called human race in general.
A lot of us are like the mosquito, escaping from disaster only to return inquisitively for another flirtation with trouble. Like the drunkard returning to his cups, the dieting fat man to his box of candy, the saved-by-a-hair motorist to another fling at high speed.
Through many generations, humanity has learned by bitter experience the things to avoid. But it returns over and over again to danger, like the moth to the candle, the mosquito to the swinging blow of its intended victim.
Our generation recently learned that war doesn't pay. We might have learned as much from disasters by previous generations. But that isn't human nature. We ignored the experience of the past. And within half a century a future generation will be ignoring what we learned—and be ready to pound the drum, wave the flag, fall into line and march off to death.
The psychology of all this is that each new generation thinks it has a corner on wisdom, and that the old folks belong to an obsolete era—"they don't understand how things have changed."
After all, there are very few dangers lurking for us. Our ancestors, nursing their bruises, left plenty of warning signs along the path, telling us how to keep out of poverty, most sickness and personal entanglements. They might as well have saved their time and carried their knowledge to the grave with them. When Smart Aleck newcomers can't find any other way to ridicule the heritage of wisdom from the past, they call it "platitudes."

PRICES
Cost of living now is about three-fifths higher than it was when the war started in 1914, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. This is, of course, an average figure for the whole country and varies with locality—higher in some places and lower in others. Most of us will agree that we live in one of the "higher" localities.
However, the three-fifths-higher estimate is logical, since it covers actual cost of living (necessities including necessary recreation) for a wage earner with five in family. Our real increase in cost of living is largely in our increased demand for luxuries—what Jim Hill called "the cost of high living."

LIARS
A New York woman, charged with obtaining $2000 worth of goods from a department store under false pretenses, is saved from a prison term by physicians who testify that she is a "pathological liar."
To most people, this is something new under the sun—that the chronic liar may be merely a victim of diseased mentality. Lying is the result of effervescent imagination, whether the fibbing is harmless or cunningly purposeful. And effervescent imagination is usually an endocrine-gland disturbance—excessive secretion by the thyroid gland in the neck. Nearly all writers are pathological liars.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS
By Olive Roberts Barton
After the Nossy had left them, Mister Sky Bow asked Nancy and Nick if they would like to see where the Earsies lived.
"Are they come more of the odd people who live in Rainbow Land?" asked Nancy.
"Yes!" nodded the little fairy man. "And a happier crowd you never saw, although they are not very handsome."
So they went along past several queer houses and other queer things and by 'n by they heard a noise.
"Isn't that awful?" remarked Nancy. "What is it?"
"It's the Earsies singing themselves to sleep," said Mister Sky Bow. "We'll have to hurry."
So they hurried as fast as they could go.
And on turning a corner they came to the place the Earsies were. But all they saw was a hundred hammocks swinging this way and that. "Hello!" called Mister Sky Bow, loudly.
Instantly all the Earsies stopped swinging and singing and sat up. But they looked so funny the Twins could hardly keep from laughing.
For the ears of these queer little folk were so large they stuck out on each side of their heads. Like sails. "Come on fellows, we've got company," called one, and with that every little Earsy jumped out of his hammock bed and came up to shake hands.
"Where are your ears?" asked one, when everybody said how d' do to the visitors.
"Here under our bobbed hair," said Nancy, showing him.
"Too bad," said the Earsy. "There are many things you can't hear with such little ones."
"But it's better in a thunder storm," said Nick laughing.
"And when Jack Frost is around," added Nancy.
"Oh, we don't mind them," said the little Earsies, running back to their hammocks. "Goodbye."

An Intricate Story of Love and Adventure
LETTER FROM SALLY ATERHORN TO MR. JOSEPH GRAVES HAMILTON
MY DEAR MR. HAMILTON:
After your generosity and that of my other friends to me, no one need ever tell me that this world is not full of kind-hearted and sympathetic people.
I cannot write you all that is within my heart, but I will accept the check which Leslie sent me from you and you will be glad to know that there is great hope of Sam getting back his sight.
One of the greatest eye specialists in the country is coming to see him tomorrow, but I think that what ever he may say to him, it will, possibly, be—his—eyes—gone—that is, the words you said to him through Leslie—that if he recovered his sight, you would find a place for him in your business. It has given him an incentive to live.
Dear Mr. Hamilton, all I can say is that both Sam and I hope you will get what you deserve while you live and can enjoy it.
Sincerely and gratefully yours, SALLY
Letter From Mrs. Joseph Graves Hamilton to Her Daughter, Mrs. Leslie Prescott
I am enclosing a letter from Sally Atherhorn written to your father. I've rarely seen your father so touched as he was by it.
I am glad, my dear child, that you are coming home before we have to leave and from what you have written me, I think that John's mother must be rather a selfish woman.
You know, my dear child, that there are mothers and mothers. Some mothers give all and some mothers ask all. I have always tried to steer toward a middle course.
I have tried to give my children everything that would make them happy, but I have also tried not to be so indulgent that I would hurt the strength and stamina of their character.
It is said that a selfish mother makes an unselfish daughter and vice versa.
I am going to tell you a secret my dear Leslie. I think there are some cases where unselfishness comes to be a virtue.
Kindness of heart and a sympathetic mind is much to be desired, but I have sometimes thought that these people who are particularly unselfish and who give in to the wants and desires and prejudices of some one who is narrow minded, selfish and prejudiced, are too lazy to stand up for their own, too indolent to make a stand which would be better not only for themselves but for the person who asks so much.
Your little apartment is perfectly lovely. You have shown a discriminating taste that makes me very proud of you and I am quite sure that John loves it as much as you do.
He told me with great pride that he had not even the place until it was all finished. I expect you did not tell him how much it cost as men never have any idea of the amount of money such things cost unless they are in the business of selling them.
John's friend, Sydney Carton, is due here tomorrow morning and we shall hope to see you the day after you get this letter.
Bear with your husband's mother's idiosyncrasies, my dear. From what John told me she has lived alone

EDITORIAL REVIEW
Comments reproduced in this column may or may not express the opinion of the Tribune. They are presented here in order that our readers may have both sides of important issues which are being discussed in the press of the day.
PUREBRED SIRE CAMPAIGNS
To promote the production of good grade and purebred dairy cattle, the agricultural departments of two railways that run through Colorado are cooperating with the extension department of the state college in a plan to trade purebred dairy sire for every scrub sire brought to a special Purebred Sire special train during its tour of the state.
What farmer would not welcome the chance for a good trade of the kind, and what breeder would not become a convert to the advantage of keeping a purebred sire of good milk-producing ancestry instead of a scrub of poor and unknown ancestry?
Just how far the proposal can be worked out is a question, but the suggestion has good possibilities. A purebred sire campaign is being contemplated at the present time in North Dakota. Possibly the Colorado plan offers a suggestion as a supplement to a better sire drive.—Fargo Daily Tribune.
"The outstanding personality of the National Wheat Conference in Chicago was Governor Nestos of North Dakota. He presided at the evening session. He won the admiration of all by his genial manner, ready wit and common sense in all his remarks."—From Warren Minnesota Sheaf.
AT THE MOVIES
THE ELTINGE
A rough and tumble fight of two kids, resulting in one of the bitterest fueds ever waged in the Cumberland Mountains of Kentucky, is a feature of Mary Miles Minter's latest Paramount picture, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," which shows at the Eltinge Theatre today and tomorrow, Monday and Tuesday. The fathers of the boy fighters appear on the scene and separate the lad with some difficulty. Then the better halves of both families arrive. The fathers start a warm argument over the cause of the boys' fighting and the mothers begin to take up the quarrel. What ensues constitutes one of the most thrilling photo dramas of the current season. Antonio Moreno, featured as leading man, plays Eric Forester, head of an unusually fine supporting cast of players.
CANTOL
The coming to the Capitol theatre tonight of "The Girl Who Ran Wild," a Universal attraction starring Gladys Walton recalls to mind "The Miracle Man" one of the greatest successes in film history. For Joseph Dowling, the Miracle Man himself is in the cast of this latest Walton starring vehicle.
The story is an adaptation of Bret Harte's famous story, "M'iss," a tale of the wild rush to California when gold was discovered in '49. The scenarization was made by Rupert Julian who directed its production. Those who are familiar with the quaint character of M'iss, the little wildcat of the mountains, will agree that Gladys Walton is an ideal type for a screen portrayal of the Bret Harte heroine. The little Universal star, though only in the third year of her motion picture career, is fast gaining standing and is one of the most popular screen players of the day.
Playing opposite Gladys Walton is Vernon Steele. Others who have important parts in the supporting cast are William Burress, Al. Hart, Mart B. Robbins, Nelson McDowell, Lloyd Whitlock and Anna Herman-dea.

RED REDMAYNES
EDEN PHILPOTTS
COPYRIGHT 1923 THE PHILPOTTS COMPANY
RELEASED BY NEA SERVICE INC., AMST. N.Y. NEWS 516.
BEGIN HERE TODAY
Michael Pendean disappears and Robert Redmayne, uncle to Michael's wife, Jenny, is suspected of the murder. Mark Brendon, criminal investigator, has charge of the case. Jenny goes to live with her uncle, Bendigo Redmayne. Robert appears near Bendigo's home and sends word to Bendigo to meet him in a nearby cave. Giuseppe Doria, who works for Bendigo, leaves his master at the meeting place. When Doria calls to bring Bendigo home he finds the cave empty and signs of a terrible struggle.
Jenny marries Doria and they go to live in Italy, where Jenny's uncle, Albert Redmayne, lives. Robert is seen in Italy and Albert sends for Brendon and for Peter Ganna, famous American detective and dear friend to Albert.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
"You're a detective inspector of Scotland Yard," continued Ganna, "and Scotland Yard is still the high-water mark of police organization in the world." The Central Bureau in New York is pretty close up, and I've nothing but admiration for the French and Italian, Secrecy Services; but the fact remains, The Yard is first; and you've won, and fairly won your place there. That's a big thing and you didn't get it without sweat and tears and blood."
But now—this Redmayne racket. In a word, your conduct of the affair don't square with your reputation. Your dope never cut any ice from the start."
Brendon did not hide his emotion, but kept silence while Mr. Ganna helped himself to a pinch of snuff.
"A great many of your 'cut-iron facts' were no facts at all."
"What were they then?"
"Elaborate and deliberate fictions, Mark."
Ganna paused again, applied himself to his gold box, and then proceeded.
"Now see how reason bears on the evidence of Robert Redmayne and his trick acts since first he disappeared. A thing occurs and there are only certain ways—very limited in number—to explain it. Either Robert Redmayne killed Michael Pendean, or else he did not. And if he did, he was sane or insane at the time. That much can't be denied and is granted. If he was sane, he committed the murder with a motive; and pretty careful inquiry proves that no motive existed. Then, assuming him to be sane, he would not have committed such a murder. The alternative is that he was mad at the time and did homicide on Pendean while out of his mind."
"But what happens to a madman after a crime of this sort? Does he get off with it and wander over Europe as a free man for a year?"
Granted the resources of maniacal cunning and all the rest of it, was it ever heard that a lunatic went at large as this man did, and laughed at Scotland Yard's attempt to run him down and capture him? No, Mark, the man responsible for these impossible things isn't mad. And that brings me back to my preliminary alternative.
"I said just now, 'Either Robert Redmayne killed Michael Pendean, or else he did not. And we may add that either Robert Redmayne killed Bendigo Redmayne, or else he did not. But we'll stick to the first proposition for the moment. And the next question you must ask yourself is this: 'Did Robert Redmayne kill Michael Pendean?' That's where your 'facts,' as you call them, begin to sag a bit, my son. There's only one sure and certain way of knowing that a man is dead; and that is by seeing his body and convincing the law, by the testimony of those who knew the man in life, that the corpse belongs to him and nobody else."
They chatted for half an hour and Mr. Ganna attained his object, which was to fling his companion back to the beginning of the whole problem that had brought them together.
"Tonight, in the train," said Peter, "I shall ask you to give me your version of the case from the moment that Mrs. Pendean invited you to take it up."
CHAPTER XII
Peter Takes the Helm.
As the detectives traveled through night-hidden Kent and presently boarded the packet for Boulogne, Mark Brendon told his story with every detail for the benefit of Mr. Ganna.
They chatted until the dawn, by which time their train had reached Paris, and as soon as they were on their way to Italy.
Mr. Ganna had determined to cross the Lakes and arrive unexpectedly at Menaggio. He had now turned his mind once more to the problem before him and spoke but little. He sat with his notebook open and made an occasional entry as he pursued his thoughts.
He looked up presently.
"The hard thing before us is this," he said, "to get into touch with Robert Redmayne, or his ghost. There are two sorts of ghost, Mark; the real thing—in which you don't believe and concerning which I hold a watching brief; and the manufactured article."
He broke off and changed the subject.
"What I'm doing is to compare your verbal statement with Mr. Redmayne's written communication," he said, patting his book.
"You'll find the story of Robert Redmayne from childhood and the story of the girl, his niece, and of her dead father. Mrs. Doria's father was a rough customer—scorpions to Robert's whips apparently—a man a bit out of the common."
"It's valuable to us, because written without prejudice. That's where it beats your very lucid account, Mark. There was something running through your story, like a thread of silk in cotton, that you won't find here. It challenged me from the first. My boy, and I'm inclined to think that in that thread of silk I shall just find the reason of your failure, before I've wound it up."
"I don't understand you, Ganna."
"You wouldn't—not yet. But we'll change the metaphor. We'll say there was a red herring drawn across the trail, and that you took the bait and, having started right enough, presently forsook the right scent for the wrong."
Brendon made no reply. Neither his conscience nor his wit threw any light on the point. Then Peter, turning to his notes, touched on a minor incident and showed the other that it admitted of a doubt.
"Do you remember the night you left 'Crow's Nest' after your first visit? On the way down the stairs, you suddenly saw Robert Redmayne standing by a gate; and when the moonlight revealed you to him, he leaped away and disappeared into the trees. Why?"
"He knew me."
"How?"
"We had met at Princetown and we had spoken together for some minutes by the pool in Fogginator Quarry, where I was fishing."
"That's right. But he didn't know who you were then. Even if he'd remembered meeting you six months before in the dusk at Fogginator, why should he think you were a man who was hunting him?"
Mark reflected.
"That's true," he said.
Peter did not pursue the subject. He shut his book, yawned, took snuff, and declared himself ready for a meal. The long day passed and both men turned in early and slept till daybreak.
Before noon they had left Bayona on a steamer and were crossing the blue depths of Maggiore.
At Luino they left the steamer and proceeded to Traga.
They wound over Lugano and came in evening light to its northern shore. Then once more they took train, climbed aloft, and fell at last to Menaggio on Como's brink.
"Now," said Peter, "I guess we'll leave our traps here and beat it to Villa Pianezza."
Within twenty minutes their on-horse vehicle had reached Mr. Redmayne's modest home and they found three persons just about to take an evening meal. Simultaneously there appeared Mr. Redmayne, his niece, and Giuseppe Doria; and while Albert, Italian fashion, embraced Mr. Ganna and planted a kiss upon his cheek, Jenny greeted Mark Brendon and he looked once more into her eyes.
Doria held back a little while his wife welcomed her uncle's friend; then he came forward, declared his pleasure at meeting Mark again and with belief that time would soon reveal the truth and set a period to the sinister story of the war-criminal.
Mr. Redmayne was overjoyed at seeing Ganna and quite forgot the object of his visit in the pleasure of receiving him.
"It has been my last and abiding ambition to introduce you to Virginia Poggi, dear Peter, so that you, he and I may sit together, hear each other's voices and look into each other's eyes."
Jenny and Assunta had hastily prepared for the visitors; and now all sat at supper and Brendon learned that rooms were already taken for him and Mr. Ganna at the Hotel Victoria.
"That's as may be," he declared to Doria's wife. "You will find, I think, that Mr. Ganna is going to stop here. He takes the lead in this affair."
After a cheerful meal Peter absolutely declined to cross Como and visit Signor Poggi on the instant.
"I've had enough of your lakes for one day, Albert," he announced, "and I want to talk business and get a rough, general idea of what more is known that Mark and I already know. Now what has happened since you wrote, Mrs. Doria?"
"Tell them, Giuseppe," directed Mr. Redmayne.
"You see the gold box—take a pinch," said Peter, holding out his snuff to the old bookworm; but the master of Villa Pianezza refused and lighted a cigar.
"I will have smoke rather than dust, my precious Peter," he said. "The man has been seen twice since you heard from my wife," began Doria. "Once I met him face to face on the hill, where I walked alone to reflect on my own affairs; and once—the night before last—he came here. Happily Mr. Redmayne's room overlooks the lake and the garden walls are high, so he could not reach it; but the bedroom of Mr. Redmayne's man, Ernesto, is upon the roof that stands up to the road. "Robert Redmayne came at two o'clock, flung pebbles at the window, awakened Ernesto, and demanded to be let in to see his brother. But the Italian had been warned exactly what to say and do if such a thing happened."

MINOT TAKES GAME
Wins Sunday Hitting Fest By
Score of 13 to 11—Takes
Saturday Game

This is a story about the ball game Sunday afternoon, and since about the action in the game, chiefly about what happened between the mid-section of Johnny Reider's bat and out where the west begins. For the feature of the game was Johnny's homer over the rightfield fence—the first time the ball has been knocked out of the local park in three years.

The right field fence is located between Bismarck and Mandan. A lot of sluggers have aimed at it and local fans began to doubt if Babe Ruth even could put it over. Johnny Reider, still suffering from a crippled foot, came up in the sixth, and slammed one to center which would have been good for a homer if he weren't a cripple but as it was he made three bases.

Johnny came up again in the seventh with two men on bases. He got rather sore at his crippled foot but didn't have time to repeat Dr. Cone's "every day in every way" so he just swung and slammed the first ball pitched over the rightfield fence. The ball cleared the fence by several feet. Later reports said ball as big as baseballs fell west of Mandan.

The distance from the home plate to the rightfield fence is 440 feet, according to J. A. Larson. The baseball regulations say that an outfield fence must be at least 235 feet from the home plate.

Another feature was Al Bernier's near home-run. In the eighth he slammed one toward the centerfield fence. McNight, who seems to be a rattling good centerfielder for a third baseman, ran back and speared it with his gloved hand. Al was past second at the time. This spoiled a last inning rally for the locals.

The game Sunday was postponed for an hour because the rain soaked the field, but a good crowd was on hand at four o'clock. Hester pitched for Minot, and Throckmorton went in for Bismarck. The visitors pounded him hard, also Joe Day who succeeded him and then Manager Shanley went in the box and held Minot down.

The game was called at the end of the eighth because of the Sunday closing law.

Another feature of the game was a great stop and throw by Gunther, Minot second baseman. He ran over into firstbase territory, dived for a grounder, knocked it down and while lying on the ground threw the runner out at first.

The two teams are scheduled to play at 6:15 this evening in the Baseball Booster Day game.

SATURDAY'S GAME

Saturday's game here was chiefly a contest between the third base bleachers and the umpire, from a spectator's point of view, with the umpire winning. Umpire Labe Saffro said a spectator threw a pop bottle at him and demanded Secretary Dresbach of the local club have the spectator ejected from the ball park. The bleacherites weren't going to let him go, and then about a hundred fans started to walk out in protest. Many of them got to the

OSEE BLUEGE

By Billy Evans.

Six months prior to the opening of the American League season, baseball experts were singing the praises of Willie Kamm.

Kamm is unquestionably a great third baseman, deserving of the many complimentary things that have been written about him. He is a marvelous fielder. Away to a very ordinary start at the bat, Kamm is showing a constant improvement in his stick work. He's a finished big leaguer right now.

Another American League third sacker to receive much honorable mention in the spring dope from the southern training camps was Walter Lutzke of the Cleveland club.

Sammy Hale, who cost Connie Mack several bags of real money also drew many headlines in the pre-season dope. Hale was expected to round out Mack's infield and make Connie's club a dangerous aggregation.

Bluege Great Prospect.

Gossip from the southern camps rarely if ever mentioned the name of Osee Bluege. It is around Bluege the rest of this story is to be written.

Bluege is now playing third base for the Washington club of the American League. What is more he is going to continue playing it. No other member of the Washington club has a chance to crowd him out.

When Washington opened the season Bill Conroy, with Minneapolis for Minot, and Throckmorton went in for Bismarck. The visitors pounded him hard, also Joe Day who succeeded him and then Manager Shanley went in the box and held Minot down.

Billy Evans Says

During a recent American League game, a certain player who is a .300 batsman as averages go, three times failed in a pinch. Once with the bases filled and two out, he struck out. On another occasion with two men on he again pulled a "Casey." He missed the first two and let the umpire call the third one.

only a few years of professional experience back of him. He would at least be able to fill in, until Joe Evans, suffering from a very bad arm, recovered the strength of his whip.

Inside of a week Bluege had settled the third base problem for the Washington club. He had the position firmly clinched. There was no chance for Evans or any other extra infielder to break into the picture. Bluege had gotten the big opportunity and made the most of it.

In Bluege I am convinced the Washington club has one of the most sensational youngsters that has broken into the majors in years. He needs only a year or two of experience and regular play to round off the rough spots and mold him into one of the best third sackers in the history of the American League.

Is Sure to Hit.

Bluege is fast on his feet and can go a long way in either direction. He has a fine pair of hands and no hit is too difficult for him to try to handle. He has a wonderful arm. Occasionally his throws are a trifle inaccurate, but that is a very minor fault.

Baseball experts are positive he will field up to the major league standard, but most of them are dubious as to his hitting. I am inclined to believe that Bluege will prove a real surprise in this respect. He seems to be improving every day at the plate. He has an excellent eye, seldom hits at a bad ball and takes a snappy swing that is destined to get results.

Bluege strikes me as being about the best young prospect that has broken into the majors in years. Inside of two seasons I look for him to have reached the pinnacle of stardom.

At another stage, with the tying run on third and two out, he tapped weakly to the pitcher.

In that same game another player, regarded as a weak hitter, a man who seldom finishes with a swat average better than .250, was the hero. Twice he came up in a pinch with runners on, and each time he came through with the much desired home run.

I was umpiring the bases in the game that I have reference to. As the poor batsman came through for the second time with a timely hit, the manager of the team who was coaching at first base turned and remarked to me: "Give me those kind of batters any time, in preference to the 300 batters who get all their hits with the bases empty."

That remark brings up the point as to whether the batter with the average is always the really valuable man. In a great many cases it is just the contrary. Very often some weak batter is far more valuable in a trying situation, the real pinch, than the fellow with the fat average.

The strain plays a big part in the effectiveness of certain batters. It plays a like part in relations to certain pitchers. Some batters with high averages are worthless in a pinch. They break under the strain. It is the same with pitchers. Often a pitcher on a tail-end looms up as a star. Transferred to, or bought by a club up in the race, the pitcher at once loses his power to deceive the opposition.

The strain gets 'em. Pitching on a tail-end club with nothing at stake, certain pitchers are almost unshakable. Working on a club with a chance for the pennant, when something depends on every ball pitched, these same pitchers are practically worthless. They break under the strain. Often players vulgarly refer to such pitchers as "yellow."

This condition is more true of batters than pitchers. Many players with the bases empty and the pitcher working carefully, can hit any kind of pitching. Put these same batters up in the pinch and they immediately lose their confidence and keen eye. Their nerve fails them.

Nearly every club has some star player who seldom delivers in a pinch, and on the same club is usually some ordinary player who is a whale of an athlete with something big at stake. That is how certain players, who according to the averages are very ordinary batsmen, are more feared by pitchers than some player who ranks 75 points better in cold figures.

And after all, it is the player who does the big thing in the pinch, that is worth while.

CARRINGTON, KEEPS TEAM IN N. D. LEAGUE

Couldn't be Put in Mandan
Because of Fair Grounds,
Hester Says

Carrington will keep the Carrington-New Rockford franchise in the North Dakota State League, according to word reaching here Sunday.

The word from Carrington halted negotiations which would probably have sent the "Twins" to Valley City for the rest of the season, after league officials ruled against putting the team in Mandan.

A message was received by league officials here Sunday saying that the Carrington-New Rockford franchise was not for sale, and Carrington would take the team alone.

Saturday afternoon President Powell, Herbert Hester, manager of the Minot club, and others were in conference from about 4 to 6 p. m. with a number of Mandan citizens on the subject of Mandan taking the team.

"There were 15 Mandan men ready to underwrite the team and take the franchise for Mandan, and they were going to take up details with the Rotary club today," said Hester. "After this was agreed to, they took me out to see the fair grounds. On reaching the fair grounds he and all the fences and corals would have come down first. You can't play ball in a cattle lot, and as soon as I saw the condition of the park I called the whole thing off. Otherwise, Mandan probably would have got the team for the rest of the year."

Hester was ready to take the Carrington-New Rockford team to Valley City for the balance of the season, if necessary.

A proposition for dividing the North Dakota State League season, declaring Minot the winner in the first half and starting anew on the percentage table was being discussed today. It also is proposed to have the champion of the North Dakota league play a series with the champion of the South Dakota league.

The Minot club is playing its last game with Bismarck this series today, weather permitting, it being Baseball Booster Day. Jamestown is scheduled to play here beginning July 12.

Clayey Boardman, suspended by the local management "for indifference playing the field" declares that he was suffering from a bad leg at the time and refuses to accept suspension without pay. He says he will take his case up to Secretary Farrell of the National Association. He has not decided what he will do about playing ball with any other team.

Detroit Double Crosses
Cleveland by Sending Flagstead to Boston

By NEA Service
Cleveland, July 9.—Years ago the late Harry Pulliam, then president of the National League, in discussing a diamond dispute, coined an expression that will live in the world of sport forever, "Take nothing for granted in baseball."

Every year countless things come up in the baseball world to verify Mr. Pulliam's sizeup of the situation. In other words, in baseball you can't figure on anything until it is all over and settled.

It is said that a bit of ill-feeling now exists between the Cleveland and Detroit clubs as the outcome of the deal that sent player Flagstead from Detroit to Boston.

Cleveland wanted Flagstead, and to increase its chances of getting him had gone out of its way in favor of Detroit on several player deals, so as not to clash with the Tiger management. It is reported that the Cleveland club had been assured that it could have Flagstead for the waiver price when the proper time arrived.

So happened that the Indians got away to a flying start in the pennant race. The Tigers didn't do so well. Ty Cobb naturally didn't relish the success of his greatest rival, Tris Speaker. Cobb had no desire to further help the Indians. Flagstead might go big for Speaker and that would hurt still more.

So instead of Cleveland getting Flagstead he was traded to Boston for Outfielder Goebel, who was immediately sent to the minors, which merely proved the player was sent to a tailender rather than a club up in the race.

"Take nothing for granted in baseball," was sure a wise remark.

Kinks o' the Links

by "PRO"

The opponent drives his ball far over to the right of the course where it lodges underneath a wheelbarrow. On reaching the ball he picks it up and places it two club lengths away from the obstruction. The player contends that he should have moved the wheelbarrow, but that would not have improved his lie. What is the correct ruling?

The wheelbarrow should be removed, providing the ball was not touching the obstruction. However, it should not be moved more than a club length from the ball, which would enable you to make the stroke. If you move your ball in moving the obstruction you must replace it without penalty. If the ball touches such obstruction, you may lift it and drop the ball as near as possible to where the lie is made, but not nearer the hole.

The opponent tries to improve his lie while in the rough by bending back the tall grass, which will enable him to get to the ball without any interference. Is he permitted to do this?

The opponent has no right to improve his lie, whether it is in the rough or not. Long grass is not a hazard unless it is in the boundaries of a hazard.

Pershing's Personal Physician Prescribed For Russia's Ills; Medical Aid Saved Millions

"How's the patient this morning, Doc?"

"Better, thank you. I've given her 30,000 pounds of quinine and 700,000 pounds of cod liver oil, and it begins to look as if she would pull through."

Heroic treatment? Yes, but it was a very sick patient—the Russian bear. Henry Beeuwkes, M.D., of the United States Army, was the doctor in charge of the case, the same doctor who prescribed for General Pershing of the A. R. P., and Russia was the harder patient of the two.

It is almost two years now that Dr. Beeuwkes has been sitting at her bedside, ministering to her wants and studying her many diseases. As chief of the Medical Division of the American Relief Administration, Dr. Beeuwkes has piled on Russia's bed 470,000 blankets, 670,000 sheets, 155,000 pillow and mattress covers, most of them plainly marked United States Army or American Red Cross. He has used 890,000 towels and 90,000 pairs of slippers for Russia while her recovery was in doubt, and 86,000 times he has completely outfitted one of her newborn sons or daughters from safety pin to socks.

He has bathed her with two and a half million pounds of soap. He has suggested her with 800,000 pounds of saltpetre, he has bandaged her with 8,000,000 gauze bandages, and dosed her with 377 different kinds of medicine. He has no homeopathic treatment; it took forty tons of chloroform and ether, 57 tons of castor oil, fifteen tons of aspirin and thirty-one tons of boric acid. When her worst ailment was recurrent typhus his prescription called for 700,000 ampules of neo-salvarsan. When she was dying with cholera and smallpox he inoculated and vaccinated her some 15,000,000 times.

It has been an expensive case. The medicines and medical supplies, the vaccines and serums, the surgical instruments and the bandages, the bedding and hospital-clothing, the hot water bottles, the hypodermic needles and all the rest have run up to $7,600,000, and that bill was paid by the United States Government, which turned over $4,000,000 worth of surplus Army medical supplies for Russian relief, and by the American Red Cross, which contributed $3,600,000. But since Dr. Beeuwkes took the case the Russian Commissar of Health says that there has been a decrease of 83 per cent in the number of typhus cases reported throughout Russia and of 75 per cent in recurrent typhus, while cholera cases have shown an even greater falling off.

But with all the medical attention she has had, Russia might not have been well on the way toward complete convalescence if her diet had not been carefully looked after. The American Relief Administration has fed her some 900,000 tons of nourishing American food while Dr. Beeuwkes was prescribing for her. Now that she is stronger the doctor is planning to discontinue his visits. Colonel Haskell, the director of the Russian Unit of the American Relief Administration, has also decided that the emergency has passed and has advised the Chairman of the A. R. A., Herbert Hoover, that he will end the feeding at harvest time.

REIDER'S HOMER TOPS FENCE IN BALLPARK HERE

Local Player Knocks Ball Out of Park For First Time Since It Was Built

MINOT TAKES GAME

Wins Sunday Hitting Fest By Score of 13 to 11—Takes Saturday Game

The story about the ball game Sunday afternoon, and since about the action in the game, chiefly about what happened between the mid-section of Johnny Reider's bat and the west fence. For the first time of the game was Johnny's homer over the rightfield fence—the first time the ball has been knocked out of the local park in three years.

The right field fence is located between Bismarck and Mandan. A lot of people, who came to the game, had begun to doubt if Babe Ruth even could put it over. Johnny Reider, still suffering from a crippled foot, came up in the sixth, and slammed one to center which would have been good for a homer if he weren't a cripple but as it was he made three bases.

Johnny came up again in the seventh with two men on bases. He got rather sore at his crippled foot but didn't have time to regret Dr. Coe's "every day, in every way" so he just paraphrased it "I'll, I'll, I'll" and slammed the first ball hitting over the right field fence. The ball cleared the fence by several feet. Later reports said ball as big as baseballs fell west of Mandan.

Another feature was Al Bernier's near home-run. In the eighth he slammed one toward the centerfield fence. McNight, who seems to be a rattling good centerfielder for a third baseman, ran back and speared it with his gloved hand. Al was past second at the time. This speared a last inning rally for the locals.

The game Sunday was postponed for an hour because the rain soaked the field, but a good crowd was on hand at four o'clock. Hester pitched for Minot, and Throckmorton went in for Bismarck. The visitors pounded him hard, also Joe Day, who succeeded him and then Manager Hester went in the box and fielded Minot down.

The game was called at the end of the eighth because of the Sunday closing law.

Another feature of the game was a great stop and throw by Gunther, Minot second baseman. He ran over into firstbase territory, dived for a grounder, knocked it down and while lying on the ground threw the runner out at first.

The two teams are scheduled to play at 6:15 this evening in the Baseball Booster Day game.

Six months prior to the opening of the American League season, baseball experts were singing the praises of Willie Kamm.

Kamm is unquestionably a great third baseman, deserving of the many complimentary things that have been written about him. He is a marvelous fielder. Away to a very ordinary start at the bat, Kamm is showing a constant improvement in his stick work. He's a finished big leaguer right now.

Another American League third sacker to receive much honorable mention in the spring dope from the southern training camps was Walter Lutzke of the Cleveland club.

Sammy Hale, who cost Connie Mack several bags of real money also drew many headlines in the pre-season dope. Hale was expected to round out Mack's infield and make Connie's club a dangerous aggregation.

Another feature was Al Bernier's near home-run. In the eighth he slammed one toward the centerfield fence. McNight, who seems to be a rattling good centerfielder for a third baseman, ran back and speared it with his gloved hand. Al was past second at the time. CARRINGTON, KEEP TEAM IN N. D. LEAGUE

Couldn't be Put in Mandan Because of Fair Grounds, Hester Says

Carrington will keep the Carrington-New Rockford franchise in the North Dakota State League, according to word reaching here Sunday.

The word from Carrington halted negotiations which would probably have sent the "Twins" to Valley City for the rest of the season.

After league officials ruled against putting the team in Mandan.

A message was received by league officials here Sunday saying that the Carrington-New Rockford franchise was not for sale, and Carrington would take the team along.

Saturday afternoon President Powell, Herbert Hester, manager of the Minot club, and others were in conference from about 4 to 6 p. m. with a number of Mandan citizens on the subject of Mandan taking the team.

There were 15 Mandan men ready to underwrite the team and take the franchise for Mandan, and they were going to take up details with the Rotary club today," said Hester.

"After this was agreed to, they took me out to see the ball park. The ball diamond in the fair grounds had been ruined by the Round-up, and all the fences and corals would have to come down first. You can't play ball in a cattle lot, and as soon as I saw the condition of the park called the whole thing off. Otherwise, Mandan probably would have got the team for the rest of the year."

Hester was ready to take the Carrington-New Rockford team to Valley City for the balance of the season, if necessary.

A proposition for dividing the North Dakota State League 4 seasons, declaring Minot the winner in the first half and starting anew on the percentage table was being discussed today. It also is proposed to have the champion of the North Dakota league play a series with the champion of the South Dakota league.

The Minot club is playing its last game with Bismarck this series today, weather permitting. It being Baseball Booster Day, Jamestown is scheduled to play here beginning July 12.

Charley Boardman, suspended by the local management "for indifferent playing the field" declares that he was suffering from a bad leg at the time and refuses to accept suspension without pay. He says he will take his case up to Secretary Farrell of the National Association. He has not decided what he will do about playing ball with any other team.

Detroit Double Crosses

Cleveland by Sending Flagstead to Boston

By NEA Service

Cleveland, July 9.—Years ago the late Harry Pulliam, then president of the National League, in discussing a diamond dispute, coined an expression that will live in the world of sport forever. Take nothing for granted in baseball.

Every year countless things come up in the baseball world to verify Mr. Pulliam's slogan of the situation. In other words, in baseball you can't figure on anything until it is all over and settled.

It is said that a bit of ill-feeling now exists between the Cleveland and Detroit clubs as the outcome of the deal that sent player Flagstead from Detroit to Boston.

Cleveland wanted Flagstead, and to increase its chances of getting him had gone out of its way in favor of Detroit on several player deals, so as not to clash with the Tiger management. It is reported that the Cleveland club had been assured that it could have Flagstead for the waiver price when the proper time arrived.

It so happened that the Indians got away to a flying start in the pennant race. The Tigers didn't do so well. Ty Cobb naturally didn't relish the success of his greatest rival, Tris Speaker. Cobb had no desire to further help the Indians.

Flagstead might go big for Speaker and that would hurt still more.

So instead of Cleveland getting Flagstead, he was traded to Boston for Outfielder Goebel, who was immediately sent to the minors, which merely proved the player was sent to a tailender rather than a club up in the race.

"Take nothing for granted in baseball," was sure a wise remark.

The opponent drives his ball far over to the right of the course where it lodges underneath a wheelbarrow. On reaching the ball he picks it up and places it two club lengths away from the obstruction. The player contends that he should have moved the wheelbarrow, but that would not have improved his lie. What is the correct ruling?

The wheelbarrow should be removed, providing the ball was not touching the obstruction. However, it should not be moved more than a club length from the ball, which would enable you to make the stroke. If you move your ball moving the obstruction, you must replace it without penalty. If the ball touches such obstruction, you may lift it and drop the ball as near as possible to where the lie is made, but not nearer the hole.

The opponent tries to improve his lie while in the rough by bending back the tall grass, which will enable him to get to the ball without any interference. Is he permitted to do this?

The opponent has no right to improve his lie, whether it is in the rough or not. Long grass is not a hazard unless it is in the boundaries of a hazard.

FRENCH VOTE FAVORABLY ON ARMS TREATY

Approve Pact of Big Powers
Regarding the Pacific
Ocean and Mandates

Paris, July 9.—The Chamber of Deputies yesterday unanimously approved the Washington treaty relating to the Pacific. The Chamber passed a bill approving the treaty concluded on Dec. 12, 1921, by France, the United States, Japan and Great Britain covering the islands of the Pacific and declarations adopted relating to the Pacific mandates.

It also accepted the complementary agreement made in Washington on February 6, 1922, in which applications of the treaty were precisely defined as far as it concerns Japan.

On Saturday the Chamber approved the Washington agreement on naval limitations. Both treaties now go to the senate.

In today's debate Deputy Archibald, socialist, and radical, said that the President of the United States had expressed remarks "very unfortunate not to say unfriendly to France."

Boy Scout Troop Distributes
Them in Bismarck Today

The North Dakota, Independent Telephone company has a Boy Scout troop engaged today in distributing directories to the 2,300 telephones in Bismarck. The book also contains a list of the Mandan subscribers to whom delivery of 1,000 directories has been completed. There are 2,696 names in the directory.

With this issue the company has adopted a new style of make up in that the name is listed first followed by the address and then the telephone number.

This form is considered to be much better than that formerly used and it has been adopted by the Bell System as standard for use throughout the United States.

The printing and binding was done by the Tribune and Telephone company management has complimented the Tribune staff upon the excellent manner in which this big job was completed, stating that it is the equal of any issue gotten out by the company.

SEES INCREASED ACTIVITY IN POULTRY WORK

Fargo, N. D., July 9.—Increased activity in the poultry industry in North Dakota is evidenced by the interest displayed in the poultry exhibits at the county fairs thus far this year, according to A. O. Barton, poultry specialist of the North Dakota Extension division, who is judging the feathered exhibits at a number of the shows.

"The large displays which are being made and the number of questions which people ask show that this industry is booming," Mr. Barton declared at the Agricultural college today.

Mr. Barton gives a talk while he is placing the birds, indicating the points in which the individuals excel, and answering any questions from the onlookers. He is also giving cutting demonstrations and making lectures and giving exhibits on egg grading and poultry diseases.

He has judged the exhibits at the Pierce and Benson county fairs and is spending this week at the Stutsman and Ward county fairs. Mr. Barton will also be on the poultry program at the state fair at Grand Forks, the interstate fair at Fargo, the Missouri Slope fair at Mandan, and the Dunn, Sargent, and Dickey county fairs.

QUICK GROWTH OF CORN SHOWS N. D. IN BELT

Fargo, N. D., July 9.—Corn grown at the North Dakota Agricultural college was too high to cultivate on July 2, some of the plants exceeding five feet in height, according to L. R. Waldron, plant breeder of the Experiment station.

Many farmers of the "corn belt" states to the south and east would view the Agricultural college field with envy, according to parties who have traveled thru those states within the past week.

The corn was planted May 14 in hills 21 to 42 inches apart to make a stand of one plant per hill. The land was harrowed May 21, just before the corn emerged and was run over with a weeder June 2. It was cultivated twice since that time and hand weeded once.

"The corn is on land which has been given the equivalent of a three year rotation without manure, but sweet clover has been grown," Mr. Waldron reports. "Unless something unusual occurs, this field should easily produce 35 to 40 bushels per acre, and it is quite possible that the yield will be considerably more."

On the particular field trials are being made of hybrid corn varieties to compare the yields with those of the parent varieties. This is the third year that the work has been carried on. During the two previous years it was found that hybrid seed secured from crossing flint and dent varieties decidedly outyielded either of the parent varieties, according to observations made by Mr. Waldron.

A. R. A. Withdrawing, Leaves Food For Russian Children Weakened By Hard Years of the Famine

Although the American Relief Administration is rapidly withdrawing its personnel and planning to end its work in Russia, Russian children from Petrograd to Odessa, in thousands of schools and children's homes, are still sitting down happily to their daily meal of A. R. A. food.

Colonel William N. Haskell, when he agreed to feed up to 3,000,000 Russian children to the coming harvest, requisitioned sufficient food supplies to enable him to carry out that program. As the Relief Administration withdraws from the districts, supplies are left behind in the hands of the various committees organized to carry on the work in quantities sufficient to meet the estimated need until the new harvest is gathered. The photograph shows one of the smaller feeding centers in Moscow. It is maintained for the children who are pupils in the school pictured, but it is typical of what the A. R. A. is doing all over Russia.

The faces of the children are the best index of the success which the American Relief Administration has attained in counteracting the ravages of famine and undernourishment. They tell, better even than the letters which the children write to their American benefactors, how much the nourishing cocoa, the corn grits and the fats, the good wheat flour and American milk have meant to the millions of half-starved urchins, many of them orphans, many of them merely lost or abandoned, who have found their way into the Russian institutions—institutions so destitute of funds as to be unable to provide the bare necessities for healthful living.

The prospects are that the coming harvest will bring to Russia food enough to care for her teeming millions and leave a goodly surplus to be exported. Because it is purely an emergency organization for the relief of famine, the American Relief Administration believes that the harvest time should see the end of its Russian program. The task of relieving the general poverty that exists because of the breakdown of the industrial life of the country and the disorganization of the social and economic structures and the slow work of reconstruction and rehabilitation is left to other agencies.

But whatever may be done for them in the future, there are millions of children in Russia who will cherish the memory of the "A. R. A." kitchens, where they ate strange but hunger-quenching foods in the years of the great famine.

And then it became known to the public for the first time that there are speed laws on the Pacific, just like there are on the highways of the land.

The President Grant was steaming out of the Japanese port. A foreign flag on a rival line, bound for Vancouver, B. C., came alongside. Tauntingly, its band played, "Where Shall We Meet Again?"

The rival nosed ahead. A bell clanged in the engine room of the President Grant. Jensen, on the bridge, watched.

The American vessel spurred, and the foreign steamer did not pass again.

"Ships," says Jensen, "are like women. They are always doing the unexpected. I couldn't hold my ship back. It seemed necessary to keep ahead."

When he was reinstated he went right out and broke his previous record—this time legally. For the Shipping Board raised the speed limit when the incident of the rival and the taunting band became known.
